2026 BIENNIAL CONFERENCE ON CHEMICAL EDUCATION

UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN-MADISON
JULY 26-30, 2026

Letter from the BCCE 2026 General Chair

Dear Colleagues and Partners,

As General Chair of BCCE 2026, I invite your organization to support the largest gathering of chemistry educators in the world. When we meet in Madison, Wisconsin, in July 2026, we expect more than 1800 faculty, K–12 teachers, researchers, and education-focused professionals will come together to share ideas, build connections, and strengthen the teaching and learning of chemistry across a wide range of settings.

BCCE is more than a conference. It is a longstanding community of educators working to help students not only learn chemistry, but see its relevance in their lives and futures. Across K–12 schools, community colleges, and universities, these educators are constantly adapting—seeking out better ways to engage students, incorporate new technologies, and prepare learners for the challenges ahead.

But doing this work well takes more than dedication. It takes resources, professional networks, and access to new tools and ideas—needs that can be hard to meet as institutions navigate shrinking budgets and shifting priorities. That's where your support becomes essential. Sponsorship helps make BCCE possible: it enables educators to share strategies, discover innovations, and return to their classrooms better equipped to support their students.

BCCE 2026 also marks a milestone—nearly 50 years since the University of Wisconsin–Madison first hosted this conference. As we honor that legacy, we're also looking ahead, with new session formats, remote and on-site engagement options, and fresh approaches to participation and access.

We hope you'll consider partnering with us to help make BCCE 2026 a meaningful and memorable experience for the chemistry education community.

With appreciation,

Samuel Pazicni, PhD
General Chair, BCCE 2026

About the American Chemical Society Division of Chemical Education

The Division of Chemical Education (DivCHED) is a vibrant and growing global community of more than 3,100 educators and researchers working to improve the teaching and learning of chemistry. As a technical division of the American Chemical Society, DivCHED supports members across all educational settings (from K–12 and community colleges to research universities) through professional development, resource sharing, and community-building initiatives.

Our members bring disciplinary expertise across all areas of chemistry and education. More than 60% are based in academic institutions, and nearly two-thirds serve as professors, instructors, or academic leaders. Over one-third hold doctoral degrees, and nearly 40% identify as women. With members spanning over 50 countries and all stages of their careers, DivCHED fosters a truly global exchange of ideas and practice.

DivCHED is guided by a simple vision: advancing chemistry education for all. Our mission is to foster a vibrant and inclusive community that supports professional learning, promotes engagement, and ensures chemistry education remains vital and responsive in a rapidly changing world. Through programs like the Biennial Conference on Chemical Education (BCCE), DivCHED brings this mission to life—connecting educators, amplifying innovation, and shaping the future of the field.

ABOUT BCCE

What is the BCCE?

The Biennial Conference on Chemical Education (BCCE) is the largest professional meeting of chemistry educators in the world. Organized by the Division of Chemical Education (DivCHED) of the American Chemical Society, BCCE brings together around 1500 participants every two years for four days of symposia, hands-on workshops, poster sessions, and community-building events.

Attendees include faculty from two- and four-year colleges and universities, K–12 teachers, education researchers, curriculum developers, and graduate students. Many serve as department leaders, program coordinators, and influential voices in textbook adoption, lab design, and educational technology—making BCCE a direct line to decision-makers and classroom innovators.

BCCE is known for its welcoming, collaborative environment where ideas are exchanged freely and practice and research meet. The 29th BCCE, to be held in 2026 at the University of Wisconsin–Madison, marks a special milestone: 50 years since UW–Madison last hosted the conference in 1976. In honoring this legacy, BCCE 2026 will also look forward: introducing remote programming options and globally connected poster sessions that increase participation and access.

Whether focused on classroom practices, assessment reform, laboratory curricula, or emerging education technologies, BCCE is where chemistry educators gather to explore new ideas, connect across roles and institutions, and shape the future of the discipline.

BCCE 2026 Theme and Conference Contexts

When the University of Wisconsin–Madison hosted the 4th BCCE in 1976, the closing talk at that meeting—delivered by Professor Gilbert Haight of the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign—was titled Quo vadis, Chem Ed? The Latin phrase Quo vadis? is often translated as “Where are you marching?” and signals reflection on one’s direction, ambition, or purpose.

Fifty years later, BCCE 2026 offers a resounding answer to that question: Forward.

But to march forward—toward what we imagine for the future of chemistry education—we must also reflect back. The challenges ahead are not new, and neither are the insights. Our shared history is a resource. It shows us how chemistry education has adapted, persisted, and pushed for change. With that in mind, BCCE 2026 will be organized around six Conference Contexts—areas where chemistry education has made important contributions and holds tremendous potential for continued innovation and leadership.

WHY SPONSOR OR EXHIBIT?

Sponsoring or exhibiting at BCCE 2026 offers a unique opportunity to connect with the largest and most engaged community of chemistry educators in the world. With over 1,800 expected attendees from across K–12, two-year, and four-year institutions, BCCE gives you direct access to the professionals who shape how chemistry is taught in classrooms and labs nationwide—and increasingly, around the globe. BCCE participants aren't just educators. They are:

- department leaders and curriculum designers.
- early adopters of new tools, technologies, and research-informed practices.
- decision-makers in areas ranging from textbooks and lab equipment to curriculum and campus initiatives.
- advisors, mentors, and collaborators who influence how the next generation of chemists think, work, and engage with science.
- partners in advancing workforce readiness, public science literacy, and cross-sector innovation.

Your support helps make this gathering possible. In a time when science education faces budget constraints and increasing complexity, sponsorship goes beyond presence. It becomes a commitment to the future of teaching and learning in the chemical sciences.
